TRENDS

INSPIRATIONS ▶

Digital technology expands boundaries, connecting far away cultures, ideas, know-hows. It's a positive and caring revolution, that brings together digital excitement with human transformations.

Denim will come in deep indigo shades scattered with iridescences as if digitally illuminated. We will see a large use of ultra-pigmented details ensuring contrasting visual effects and, on the other end, a trend of tone on tone and soft colors.

Technology and raw and affirmed naturals: two very distinct universes brought together to strengthen each other. The goal is to extract the best from technology, push through ecological barriers, reusing, hybridizing, augmenting.

The main trend of this season will be putting an end to traditional combinations, all while opening up to new ways of experimenting: the collection will place emphasis on contrasts, proposing new and unexpected elements together. This will be done both with materials and colors.

Combinations influenced by contemporary art currents, by the digital universe and by the latest innovations within the material sector will give life to original and unexpected reinterpretations of design, concepts and colors from the fashion world.

There will be a new take on reflective leathers, a wise use of iridescence, digital prints, unusual fabrics, rubber materials and transparent PVCs, tying all of this together with neon, sportswear and digital artwork.

The experimenting should be done while thinking about safeguarding our planet, creating 100% eco-friendly solutions that do not sacrifice beauty and innovation. Unusual mixes will be created, merging the most "classic" leathers with high tech elements.

Last but not least, label size. Fall Winter 2020 Collection will bring with its arrival new shapes and new sizes that will become the defining detail to the clothing. Make space, then, for extravagant letters and maxi size labels. Labels are important, but let's not forget about details like pockets, decorative strips and exclusive inserts that are sure to give character and value to your every article.
